Invergordon

Invergordon byggdes 1960 långt uppe i högländerna några kilometer utanför Inverness.

Syftet var att förse den växande blendindustrin med grainwhisky. Affärerna gick bra, bolaget introducerades på Londonbörsen och man började bygga egna maltwhiskydestillerier. Först in house-destilleriet Ben Wyvis och sedan Tamnavulin. Därefter knöts Bruichladdich, Tullibardine och Deanston till bolaget, och ännu senare Jura och Glenallachie. Efter en lång rad ägarskiften såldes Invergordon 1993 till Whyte & Mackay som nu producerar 40 miljoner liter whisky årligen till sina många blendsorter från Invergordon.

Orkneys historia är starkt präglad av oss skandinaver, därav kopplingen mellan Highland Park och vikingarna. Sverige är faktiskt det land som konsumerar mest Highland Park per capita i världen! Highland Park är ett av få destillerier som har en range upp till 50 år.

Unika med Highland Park:

Torven på Orkney - jorden är unik då det inte växer några träd på Orkney vilket påverkar torvens inverkan på whiskyn.

Faten - endast de bästa och finaste ekfaten används till att göra Highland Park. De sherryfat som används är tio gånger dyrare än de bourbonfat som vanligtvis används inom industrin.

Klimatet - det speciella och vindpinade klimatet på ön har en stor del i den karaktär som gör Highland Park så unik världen över, där sötma möter rökighet.

Destilleriet grundades 1826 [1] i namnet Sir William Pulteney (som dog 1805) och som Pulteneytown heter.

Destilleriet var det nordligaste på det skotska fastlandet (det har använts av Wolfburn Distillery nära Thoro) och var ganska otillgängligt, utom till sjöss, när det etablerades.

Korn fördes in av havet och whisky skickades ut på samma sätt. Många av destilleriarbetarna anställdes också som fiskare.

Destilleriet stängdes 1930 på grund av minskad handel efter att den lokala församlingen verkställde förbudslagar men öppnades igen 1951 när omröstningen upphörde efter att lagen avskaffades. Äg nu av Inver House Distillers.
